SPOTLIGHT
ON AFRICA

FOR Hongkong, the chief interest in the recent House of Commons debates on the Devlin Commission report on Nyasaland and the Kenya Hola Camp deaths was the future of Mr Alan Lennox-Boyd and it is pleasing to read that he has survived both without serious damage to his reputation.

During his term of office he has won wide acclaim for his liberal outlook and his fine understanding of the needs of the various colonies committed to his charge. Rarely has he incurred such bitter and widespread criticism as during the recent troubles in Africa. Events have shown he was mistaken in supporting unreservedly the ruler-Intendant of Hola Camp who is being compulsorily and hastily retired for gross dereliction of duty. And the doubts cast upon "the Nyasaland 'massacre plot'" by the Devlin Commission suggest that a nervous governor badly advised the Colonial Secretary, though in the circumstances it is unreasonable to be too censorious.

GOVERNMENT speakers have pointed out that without the prompt declaration of a state of emergency the deplorable casualty figure of 51 killed and 71 injured might have been considerably higher and those who remember our own riots almost three years ago would probably agree with the view. The Government's action in approving only certain features of the Devlin report—tantamount to a vote of no confidence in an independent tribunal of its own creation—has given the critics much to talk about, though it would have given them very much more had the Government accepted the Commission's censure completely. Mr Lennox-Boyd does not therefore emerge from the debate unscathed. Indeed the surprise is that with the elections imminent the Labour Party did not aim their torpedoes more carefully. For it is apparent from the brief reports published in Hongkong that neither Labour nor Government spokesmen particularly distinguished themselves.

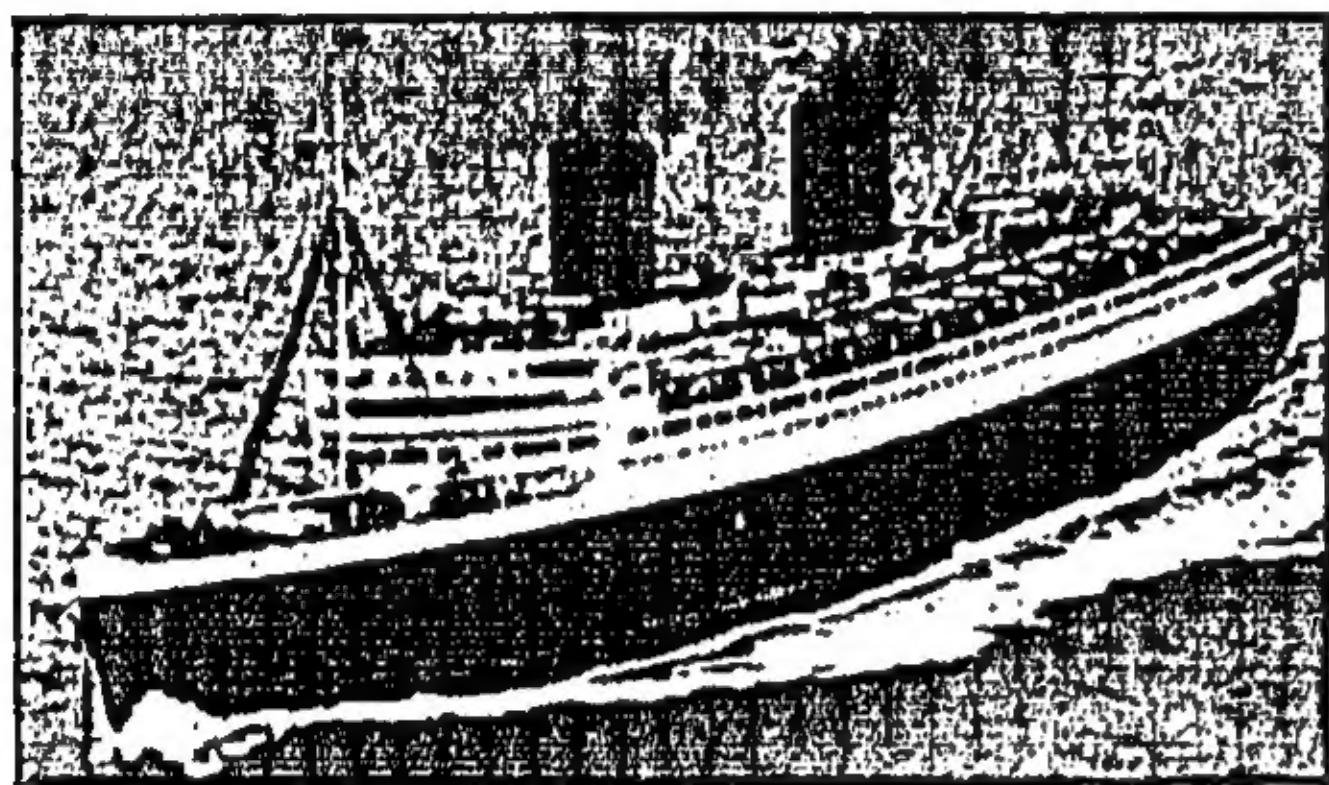

WHAT effect all this will have on the Government's chances in the elections which most observers expect in October it is difficult to say. Mr Macmillan's popularity according to the public opinion polls has declined recently, but a successful summit meeting later this year could do much to improve his party's chances. Then there is Labour's own crisis of indecision over the Hydrogen bomb which will come to a head at the October Party conference. But it is said that Labour's schism lingers on as a potential election threat, it must also be clear from two days debate on Africa that the problems of this unhappy land are far from resolved. They may not be big enough to sink the Government in an election, but the Tories would be wise not to repeat that lamentable statement of the Colonial Secretary—"I have the onliest conscience in the world"—when there is clearly so much cause for serious concern in the trend of things in Africa.

Liner Queen Elizabeth In Collision With Freighter DEEP DENT IN BOWS

New York, July 29.

The liner Queen Elizabeth suffered a dented starboard bow when she collided with an American freighter in dense fog off Conoy Island today. The mishap occurred while a lifeboat drill was in progress on board the Queen Elizabeth. The 83,673-ton ship, which had sailed for Europe 90 minutes before with 1,959 passengers and a crew of 1,290, turned around and steamed back to her Hudson River pier with her starboard bow deeply dented.

Ancient Sword Lost In Japan Turns Up In U.S.

San Francisco, July 29.

An ancient Japanese sword, lost in a Tokyo burglary eleven years ago, was recovered by police here today.

The small 13th century sword, one of Japan's National Art treasures, has been the object of a world-wide hunt by the Japanese since 1948.

The medieval 13-inch weapon was found in the possession of a local art dealer. He told police he had no idea the sword was stolen and was released after questioning.

The sword was stolen when burglars broke into the Tokyo home of Takakuni Mitsui, a member of the famed Mitsui family. All treasures stolen in the burglary were recovered except the sword.

The tiny weapon, valued at $10,000, was handed down in the Mitsui family from generation to generation for over 700 years.

The Tokyo attorney, Mr Arthur K. Mori, heard that a sword, similar to the missing one, was being offered for sale to collectors by a San Francisco dealer.

Mr Mori wrote to a friend, Mr Kurt Melchior, a local lawyer who contacted police. They wrote to Tokyo for a full description of the sword.

The dealer told the police he was in Japan with the army during the occupation and purchased the sword from a Japanese teacher.

He said he paid the equivalent of $35,000 for the weapon and realized it was "very old." But he had no idea it was stolen.

The sword now awaits the filing of a formal claim by the owners.—Reuter.

Freighter Holed In Collision
Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 29.

The Norwegian freighter Francisville and the steamer Matthew Luckenbach collided in dense fog early today off Cape Cod Canal.

The Francisville's starboard side was punched open and one compartment forward of the engine room was flooded. The ship developed a 20-degree starboard list.

The Matthew Luckenbach's bow was damaged in the collision. No injuries were reported. The Matthew Luckenbach carried a crew of 40 men and no passengers.—UPI.

The other ship was the U.S. Lines 10,500-ton American Hunter, carrying 50 crewmen and six passengers. It sustained a long dent on one side.

The collision occurred inside New York harbour as the Queen Elizabeth headed toward the Atlantic and the American Hunter headed for its New York pier. Both vessels were equipped with radar, and the Coast Guard launched an immediate investigation to determine the cause of the accident.

Mr Edwin Seymour Bell, General Manager in America for the Cunard Lines, said in a statement that the Queen Elizabeth was dead still in the water when the American Hunter bumped into her at a slow rate of speed after the fog closed in. He said that when the fog closed in, the Elizabeth was moving just fast enough to manoeuvre.

Two Radars

"Two radars were operating," he said, "one on a four-mile and one on a two-mile scale." He said the closest ship was reported to be about four-tenths of a mile away.

"The ship's fog signal was being sounded, and all precautions were being taken," Mr Seymour-Bell said. "The other ship suddenly appeared out of the fog on the starboard bow. At that time, the Queen Elizabeth's engines had been put at full speed astern because the other ship had appeared to be approaching dangerously close on the radar."

The Queen Elizabeth was standing dead in the water when the collision occurred. The American Hunter hit the Queen Elizabeth on the starboard bow. The American Hunter was at right angles to the Queen Elizabeth at the time.

Not Going Fast

"I understand the other ship was not going very fast. Nothing could have been done by the Queen Elizabeth that was not done to avoid the collision. After the collision, the American Hunter backed off and drifted down the starboard side of the Queen Elizabeth."

Passengers said they were just going through their first lifeboat drill on the top deck when the bump in the fog came.

Many of the ship's passengers lined the railings waving to newsmen and curiosity seekers on shore when the ship was nudged up to her pier by tugboats.

Tourists On Board
The vessel carried holiday-bound tourists, including Lt. Gen. James Van Fleet and his wife, and a number of United Nations diplomats.

The American Hunter bore a 20-foot-long dent on one side. It was due to steam to its berth tomorrow morning.

Capt. George Walker of the American Hunter radioed that "the bow of his ship was stove in from the lower forepeak to the bulkhead. Five bulkhead frames on both sides of the bow were bent and distorted. Able to manoeuvre."

Dense Fog

A few of the passengers were in dining rooms eating their first meal aboard ship after gay farewell parties when the collision came.

Passengers who were on deck said the fog was so dense they could not see what the Elizabeth had run into.

WOMAN SOBS IN COURT

An elderly Chinese woman broke into uncontrolled sobs and pleaded hysterically with the bench when her application to the Full Court for leave to appeal was refused this morning.

The Chief Justice, Sir Michael Hogan, and Mr Justice R. H. Mills-Owens ruled that the woman, Wong Pao-lin, had submitted no grounds on which they could grant leave to appeal.

The Chief Justice said: "You have my sympathy, but we just cannot continue with these proceedings."

COMPENSATION
Wong Pao-lin was seeking leave to appeal against the judgment handed down by Judge Creighton in the District Court on the 21st of December last, in which he refused to uphold her claim for $5,000 compensation from Wong Wai-yuen, lorry driver, and the Tung Nam Transportation Company, for the death of her son Yue King-leung in an accident on April 19 last year.

Judge Creighton refused the applicant leave to appeal against his judgment delivered on June 29.

STUDENT STILL MISSING

The family of the second missing student, Lee Nishien, are advertising in Chinese papers calling upon friends and relatives who might be accommodating him to urge his return.

The family told the China Mail that Lee was still missing this morning.

The 22-year-old student left home on Monday afternoon to find out about the results of this year's School Certificate Examination.

It was said that this was the second year in succession he failed the examination. He had been, however, a scholarship student.

The first missing student, Leung, who left a note on leaving home after learning he failed the examination for the third year in succession, returned after a half-day absence.

Police Fire At Fleeing Car With Wanted Man

Police fired two shots at the tyres of a fleeing car in Yen Chau Street, Kowloon, yesterday in an attempt to arrest a man suspected to have impersonated an inspector and attempting to extort money.

The chase took place at about 12.10 p.m. when the suspect failed to obey an order to halt from the police lying in wait for him near a machine shop.

The incident arose when the man called at the machine shop on Tuesday, saying he was a certain inspector on an inspection of the premises.

Then he was reported to have gone on to pick out on the cockpit the size of which he said exceeded the regulations.

Fearing prosecution or the cost of reconstruction, the proprietor was reported to have pleaded with the man and invited him to tea.

But then he became suspicious.

Meeting
In a private meeting with the man, it was reported, the proprietor agreed to pay $200 and made an appointment to make the payment at his shop the next day (yesterday).

He later reported the matter to the police who arrived before time and, in plain clothes, lay in wait near the shop for the man.

Shortly after noon, the suspect arrived, calling loudly for the proprietor and while doing so was accosted by a detective inside the shop.

Sensing something wrong, the man dashed to his car ignoring the police order to halt.

He drove his car away and the police fired two shots after the car one of which hit a rear tyre.

The car was later found abandoned in Arnan Street. A suspect was arrested in Tsim-shatsui later in the evening, a Government spokesman said this morning.

Britain's Self-Made Top Men
London, July 29.

More than nine out of 10 of Britain's top company directors went to State schools and worked their way up from the bottom, the Daily Mail reports today.

The newspaper says that this has emerged from a secret ballot of its 30,000 members by the Institute of Directors.

Only eight per cent of the members of the Institute were found to have gone to public (private) schools.

The Daily Mail says the survey has shown that "far from being a privileged class with inherited wealth, the Institute members are nearly all self-made men."

Kerala Govt May Be Replaced

New Delhi, July 29.

The Communist Government of Kerala State will be dismissed and replaced by presidential rule before the weekend, according to well-informed political circles here tonight.

It is understood that opinion at a Central Cabinet meeting today favoured immediate intervention in the state, where 10 people have been killed in the opposition parties campaign to oust the communist rulers.

The Central Cabinet will meet again tomorrow and is expected to finalise a decision to advise President Rajendra Prasad to issue a proclamation suspending the constitution in Kerala and taking over the administration of the state.

This will mean the automatic dismissal of the communist government. New elections would then be held in about six months time.

Today's two-hour Cabinet session was presided over by the Prime Minister, Mr Nehru, who had earlier called on the President.

PRESIDENTIAL RULE
Presidential rule has been imposed five times in various states since India became independent in 1947, but this would be only the second time that a Ministry in office has been dismissed.

In the meantime, President Prasad would probably administer the State through the present State Governor, Mr B. Ramakrishna Rao.

The Communists today opened their "rehabilitation campaign" against events in Kerala by presenting to President Prasad a memorandum or "charge sheet" alleging misrule by the Congress Government in West Bengal and demanding its dismissal.—Reuter.

Tibetan Exodus

New Delhi, July 29.

There has been a new influx of refugees from Tibet into India, informed sources said today. Some 2,000 Tibetans have recently crossed the border into India, the sources said.

The Tibetans crossed from the northern part of Assam. They will be settled in Dibrugarh, an oil town.—AFP.

Hongkong: Outlet For PI's 'Flight Balances'

New York, July 29.

Currency expert Franz Pick today charged that illegal monetary transactions in the Philippines were "mostly in the hands of Chinese dealers on the islands," whose primary foreign outlet was Hongkong.

"Monthly volumes of such transactions averaged between $14,000,000 and $18,000,000 during 1958," Pick estimated. "Most trading was represented by strict compensation dealings. Under-invoicing of exports and over-invoicing of imports represented a major part of the trade. Banknote smuggling accounted for less than 10 per cent of these transfers."

"A powerful politicians and mostly unknown Chinese intermediaries specialise in these transactions, they are difficult to stop as long as currency controls remain in existence."

Pick estimated Philippine "flight balances" in 1958 totalled $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 in Hongkong and New York alone.—UPI.

Lancashire Helped By HK Quota

London, July 29.

The Hongkong quota agreement was listed by a leading manufacturer today as one—but the least important—of five factors which have helped to "almost completely" restore confidence to the Lancashire industry.

Mr Kenneth Boardman, Chairman of Boardman Marden Limited, said in a statement published today that while 1958 had been an extremely poor year, by the turn of the year five factors emerged in quick succession which almost completely restored confidence to the distressed home industry and could very well bring an end to the long slump.

FIVE FACTORS

These five factors, he said, were: Government aid plan, break-up of yarn spinners agreements, a warm Spring, incentive budget and the Hongkong quota agreement.

He said the government aid of £36,000,000 which was approved by the House of Lords yesterday, was "remarkably generous."

Regarding the Hongkong quota agreement, he said: "The industry had now established a precedent which any future Labour Government may hesitate to replace with its 'buying scheme' and it is interesting to recall that the agreement was only finalised when a general election appeared imminent."

The manufacturer paid tribute to the "high standard" of Hongkong textile production and "outstanding business efficiency." He believed Hongkong would "probably sell more of its goods to America during the next twelve months than it will to this country."

He added: "It is almost impossible to place new orders with the Colony which will arrive here before February 1960."—AFP.

RICH WOMAN FLEES FROM FORTUNE-HUNTING ROMEOS

London, July 30.

A GIRL aged 21 who inherited £90,000 is reported to have fled to France to escape fortune-hunting Romeos.

Julia Skinner was a £9 a week typist until she won the money in June in a court action over the estate of her late father, Major James Skinner. She said then she had no regular boy-friend—and within an hour offers of marriage came pouring in by letter and telephone.

The Daily Sketch quoted her step-father, Mr Charles Blake, as saying that hundreds of would-be suitors pestered Julia.

Mr Blake said she had gone to France to escape the constantly ringing telephone. Then she would go to the Costa Brava in Spain and, later visit relatives in the United States and Canada.

He added that Julia had no intention of going to France, but she got fed up with all the persistent suitors.

Before she left, she told the post office in Chelsea, London, to destroy all mail merely addressed to her at "King's Road, Chelsea."—China Mail Special.

Kassem Hits Out At Kirkuk Trouble-Makers

Bagdad, July 29.

The recent Kirkuk uprising against the Kassem regime was staged by the extreme left-wing and Premier Kassem tonight barred plans to spread the revolt to "several other towns".

How Tape Was Smuggled Out Of Russia

New York, July 29.

The original tape of the now famous television wrangle between Vice-President Richard Nixon and Nikita Khrushchev was taken out of Russia wrapped in a dirty shirt and Soviet customs officials completely overlooked it, Variety, American show business trade journal reported today.

It quoted Mr. Philip Gundy, President of Ampex Tape Corporation, as saying he "felt like a spy" when he brought the 10 and half inch reel into the United States.

Varley said Mr. Gundy arranged to tape the visit of Mr. Nixon and Khrushchev in the American exhibition in Moscow and to have it played back immediately.

"Dynamic"

As soon as he had guided Khrushchev's little finger to the button that began the playback he knew he had something "dynamic and exciting". The Soviet Premier cried out in English when he saw himself on the screen "Ooooh! Like real!"

Mr. Gundy then grabbed the reel and two hours later was on his way to the Moscow airport.

"The tape, wrapped in a dirty shirt and concealed under business papers in a small valise, was completely overlooked by customs," Variety reported.

"Gundy says he had decided from the outset to avoid the red tape that clearance through Russian and U.S. officials would have involved,"—Reuter.

City Council Says 'No' To A Turban

Manchester, July 29. The Manchester City Council today refused to employ a Sikh bus conductor because he insisted on wearing a turban instead of the uniform bus cap.

It turned down a proposal that it should reconsider its Transport Committee's recommendation by 41 votes to 31.

The Sikh, Mr. S. S. Sagar, a graduate of Punjab University said afterwards that he would seek advice and guidance on the matter.

"I want the opinions of Manchester people," he added. "If they do not want Sikhs on the buses then I am quite satisfied with the position."—Reuter.

Stole Water

Gainesville, Ga., July 29. J. P. Reynolds, former president of Best Ice Co., was found guilty yesterday of stealing 300 million gallons of city water through an illegal tap on a city-operated sprinkler system in his plant.—UPI.

But he said security forces "had been able to put down rebellious moves quickly."

Kassem deplored the fact that whereas the overthrow of the monarchy a year ago had resulted in the loss of only 10 lives, more were killed in the Kirkuk uprising. He did not indicate how many more, however.

Pseudos

He sharply attacked the "pseudo-democrats who, under the cover of wanting to protect the Government from imaginary plots, recently organized savage massacres at Kirkuk."

Observers noted that this was the first time that Kassem placed responsibility for the recent bloodshed—conservatively estimated at between 20 and 60 lives, but said in some quarters to number several hundreds—upon the extreme left-wing fringe.

General Kassem defended the Turkomen tribes who had been the victims of racism carried out by political organizations pretending to be anti-racist and democratic.

The Power

"We have the necessary power to crush the pseudo-democrats who aim at provoking new troubles in Iraq," he said.

"The persons responsible for the Kirkuk massacres would be tried in court," he said.—AFP.

Now Japan Plans An Atomic Sub

Tokyo, July 29.

Engineers of the Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Reorganized Ltd. today tested a model of Japan's proposed atomic submarine.

The trial of the three-ton midge nuclear submarine was held outside Port Kobe.

A spokesman for the engineers said the tests were "quite successful."

The model was 30 feet long and two-and-a-half feet wide. Engineers operated it by control from a ship.—Reuter.

Mac Will Miss Gathering Of The Clan

Glasgow, July 29. More than 300 Macmillans, many from the United States and the British Commonwealth, will gather near here on August 8, but the Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, has turned down an invitation.

A letter to the Clan chief, General Sir Gordon Macmillan, published today he said he expected to be busy in England on that date.—Reuter.

TV Set For Morrison

London July 29. Mr. Herbert Morrison, a former Home and Foreign Secretary, was today presented with a television set by opposition Labour Party Members of Parliament here to mark his retirement from the House of Commons.

Another gift to Mr. Morrison, who is not standing at the next General Election, was a morocco fitted writing case.

An inscription on the television set read: "To the Right Honourable Herbert Morrison from his colleagues in the parliamentary Labour party in appreciation of his outstanding services to the Labour movement."—Reuter.

Skirts Above The Knees Says Dior II

By PAT HERMAN

Paris, July 29.

Skirts must be lifted above the knee, Dior designer Yves Saint-Laurent decreed today in an exclusive interview that blew the lid off the current Paris autumn fashion season.

The brilliant, young, 23-year-old designer's interview came less than 24 hours before he presents his autumn collections.

His word on shorter skirts flew smack against the lengthening hemlines that other designers have been showing all week in this world fashion capital.

A Tradition

But audacity is a Dior tradition. The late, great Christian Dior made his name in 1947 with a "new look" that lengthened hemlines while all the other fashion houses were hiking them.

The world followed Dior—and has ever since. Today Saint-Laurent—who look over his shoulder after Dior's death two years ago—made his bid to equal the master's major stroke of a dozen years ago.

"La jupe sera au dessus des genoux," Saint-Laurent told UPI. In plain English that meant, "The skirt will be above the knees."

A Gamble

Whether the fashion world would follow him was a gamble. But gambling—and winning—is also a Dior tradition, backed up by a world fashion empire and the fortune of French textile magnate Marcel Boussac. Dior has branches in Europe, the United States, South America and the Far East.

"The secret of my silhouette is in the skirt and the way it is worked," Saint-Laurent said.

Just about everything else about the Dior line will be different from what the other designers are doing, Saint-Laurent said.

Suit jackets will be short (those of others are longer this season). Shoulders will be narrow (the rest of the fashion pack has broadened them). Collars will be small (hardly a Paris dressmaker has failed to feature the broad collars this week). Fabrics will be soft and supple (others are stiff).

New Perfume

Earlier in the day, Greek-born Jean Dessus, who has dressed such customers as Greek Orthodox nuns and Mrs. Aristotle Onassis, presented an autumn collection that would please them both.

Dessus launched his line in a salon lavishly sprayed with his new perfume, "C'est lui de Jean Dessus" (Dessus's own).

Dessus (rhymes with dresses) discreetly dropped the hemline, sometimes below mid-calf. This would have pleased his most conservative clients.

He also lengthened the torso and widened the shoulders in line with what his colleagues have done so far in the new season.

Exciting

But it was an exciting enough collection to have made even the international set happy. There was lots of interest in the skirt—the longest that Paris has seen so far this season.

Dessus buttoned, draped, bloused and flared the skirt. The focal point usually was below the hipline or 12 inches above the hemline.—UPI.

New Hitch In Print Strike Peace Talks

London, July 29. UNION leaders discussing a back-to-work formula which may end Britain's six-week-old printing stoppage came up against a stumbling-block today.

The Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union objected to a proposal by the employers that men from other printing unions should help in the foundries during busy periods.

Representatives of the 10 unions involved in the stoppage, which started over a claim for more pay and shorter hours, were continuing their discussions tonight.

Target Date

Next Tuesday, the first working day after the August Bank Holiday weekend, is believed to be the target date set by both sides for a return to work.

Lord Birkett, independent chairman of the peace talks, said tonight that "real progress" had been made in today's union discussions.—Reuters.

Bank Robber Giggled Out

New York, July 29. A 19-year-old bank teller who had been charged with robbing a bank robber the night of the hold-up, police said.

The man handed teller Anthony Cangelosi a note saying: "Put $5,000 in a bag and give it to me."

"What would you do with $5,000?" asked Cangelosi.

"Don't ask questions," the man reported. "Just put it in and give it to me." asked Cangelosi.

The bandit giggled, and left.—UPI.

Dangers Of War—By Mr. K

BLUNT TALK WITH NIXON

Moscow, July 29. Mr. Nikita Khrushchev, the Soviet Prime Minister, spoke bluntly of the dangers of a Soviet-United States clash when he had talks last weekend with Vice-President Richard Nixon, Tass said today.

Mr. Khrushchev, making his first disclosure of the content of his talks with Mr. Nixon, told engineering workers at Dnepropetrovsk yesterday that he had offered Mr. Nixon competition between socialism and capitalism and that Mr. Nixon had "spoken in favour of peace."

Reason Needed

"Ideological problems cannot be solved by guns—reason is needed," Mr. Khrushchev said. He also made an appeal for a summit meeting.

Mr. Khrushchev said he told Mr. Nixon that if West German militarists started a war the USSR could in several hours wipe out West Germany and other countries where there were anti-Soviet military bases.

According to Tass, which was quoting from a report of the speech being published in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda tomorrow, the Soviet Premier said: "The barometer does not point to war. Tendencies towards safeguarding peace prevail in all countries."—Reuters.

Dodging Delegates At Red Festival

Vienna, July 29. Festival-makers and festival-breakers began a veritable game of "hide-and-seek" today at the Communist-sponsored World Youth Festival, now in its third day here.

The game consisted in the festival organizers changing the place of a meeting at the last minute in order to confuse the anti-festival crowd, which had taken to sending opposition discussion groups to meetings.

Some friction has arisen too within some of the delegations. So far, neither the Indian nor American delegations have been able to agree on a leader.

DANGER OF EXPULSION

Furthermore, 57 American participants were in danger of being expelled from the festival if they did not soon pay their dues.

Contradictory reports have been circulating about the departure of a group of 20 Italians. Some have interpreted their departure as a mark of dissatisfaction, while festival organizers claimed they had come here only for the opening parade last Sunday.—AFP.

Grivas Dissociates Himself From Cyprus Agreements

Athens, July 29. General George Grivas, former leader of EOKA, the Greek-Cypriot underground organisation in Cyprus, said tonight he "dissociated" his responsibilities from the Zurich and London agreements settling the Cyprus dispute.

These agreements, he said in a statement, were signed "without my being consulted. I was informed of their contents after their signature and at first place and even incorrectly as regards certain points likely to evoke my opposition."

Unforgivable

General Grivas added: "I particularly dissociate my responsibilities as regards the interpretation and implementation of the agreements on account of the attempted unforgivable connection to Anglo-Turkish demands."

The EOKA leader also warned the Greek-Cypriot population of "the dangers in which it is threatened, by the collaborators of the agreements, to be entangled and become an accessory to the ratification of these agreements."

General Grivas referred in his statement today to an unspecified point in the agreements on which, he said, "I was informed only upon my return to Greece that there are verbal commitments."

Guaranteed

A Greek Foreign Ministry spokesman said there were "no verbal commitments" underlain in connection with the agreements.

The Zurich Agreement, signed by Britain, Turkey and Greece, last February 11, was the basis for the London agreement of February 19 which provided for Cyprus independence guaranteed by the three signatory countries, transfer of sovereignty to the island was expected to take place within a year.—Reuters.

Big Baby

Los Angeles, July 29. Powell Crocley, manufacturer of small automobiles, was quoted in Motor Life magazine, as saying the new Detroit small cars aren't small enough. Asked what car he drives, Crocley replied without a quiver, "A Cadillac Brougham."—UPI.

Over-Voted

Chesterfield, July 29. Union leaders ordered a new election at Parkhouse Colliery after a somewhat over-enthusiastic vote for union officers. The number of ballots cast exceeded the number of eligible voters by 162 votes.—UPI.

Whistling Tourists Annoy Villagers

London, July 29. INHABITANTS of Stratford-on-Avon which contains Anne Hathaway's Cottage, are reported to be indignant about the behaviour of American tourists.

According to the Daily Herald, American tourists do not confine their excitement to Shakespeare's wife or her thatched cottage.

The newspaper says: "They wolf-whistle at village girls and women, poke fun at others, and invite themselves into the villagers' gardens to peer through open doors and windows."

Mrs Margaret Reid, of Cottage Lane, is quoted as saying: "We are not on show. The ridiculous thing is that most of them who whistle and shout at village girls are middle-aged, balding and 'weighty'."

EMBARRASSING

Mrs Eileen Eakins, aged 21, who lives next door to Anne Hathaway's Cottage, is reported as saying: "It's embarrassing finding crowds of people looking—and whistling—at me."

A neighbour, 22-year-old Miss Anne Billingham, is quoted as saying: "Men have walked up my path and taken pictures inside my home."

"But I don't think they mean to be rude,"—China Mail Special.

Death Of Music Hall Star

London, July 29. Mr Charlie Clapham, former member of the British music hall comedy team "Clapham and Dwyer", has died at St Leonards-on-Sea, Sussex, aged 65, it was announced today.

He and Bill Dwyer, who died in 1943, were one of the first radio teams in Britain.

They were together for 14 years until Dwyer retired in 1940 through ill health.

Clapham carried on with another partner still retaining the act's double name.

Clapham was a barrister's clerk when he met Dwyer, a motor mechanic. They started together with a comedy act at private parties and were soon booked up six nights a week.

Clapham was a dapper, monocled, member of the team who always wore a top hat.—Reuters.

THE QUEEN MEETS WIDOWS OF FISHING DISASTER

Point Du Chene, New Brunswick, July 29. THE Queen talked with widows and heroes of the June shipping disaster today before sailing through the Northumberland Strait where it claimed 35 lives.

The Queen and Prince Philip spent 20 minutes at a fishing wharf where widows and surviving children of 10 of the victims were lined up. Near them were heroes of the disaster—other fishermen who saved some whose boats were capsized by an Atlantic gale, but were unable to save others.

Only 10 of the bodies have been recovered in the weeks since the big storm that plunged Canada into mourning just as the Queen and Prince Philip were starting their 10-day tour which ends Saturday. Those men's widows were here today with their children. Most still were in black mourning.

In Navy

Some, like Mrs Yvonne Chalmers, who brought 12 of her 13 now fatherless children and explained to the Queen that, the fourth, aged 18, was away serving in the navy, tried to smile as the Royal visitors stopped briefly to chat.

But they were pathetic efforts. The sight of so many others like themselves put them off, and the occasional cry by youngsters who had been waiting at the wharf for two hours made it even tougher.

The Queen and Prince Philip steered clear of asking the widows about the disaster, which they were told about at the time and over which the Queen sent her formal condolences. But they showed deep interest and asked several questions of fishermen who worked as rescuers and have been acclaimed as heroes.

Keen Interest

One in that category was 52-year-old Captain Bernard Jenkins of Esquimaux, N.B. He told Prince Philip, who often shows a sailor's keen interest in triumphs and tragedies at sea, that he saved three of four crewmen of another boat, and was unable to reach the fourth.

The Queen and Prince Philip, drove here from Moncton, New Brunswick, after a day in which they travelled through the Maritimes by Comet jet transport and by car. They started out this morning from Fredericton, New Brunswick, where they stayed overnight in an hotel.

At Point du Chene, they boarded their barge and headed into deep water to go aboard the Royal yacht Britannia en route to Charlottetown.—UPI.

'Volunteers' To Build Playground

Singapore, July 28. The Government announced tonight that "volunteer" civil servants totalling "a minimum of 5,000" and including women would on Sunday take part in the building of a public park and children's playground.

The Government tonight detailed the work which the "volunteers" who they said, would include ministers and members of the legislature would carry out.—Reuters.

To London Pub By Rickshaw Or Sedan Chair?

London, July 29. Rickshaws and sedan chairs will be allowed to carry customers to and from the Grosvenor public house in London's wealthy Belgrave district, the High Court was told today.

Tenants of the house, the Watney Combe Reid Company, were granted a renewal of their licence on agreeing to a condition that no private cars would be allowed in the fashionable mews in which it is situated.

Customers would have to park their cars somewhere else and walk down the cobbled cul-de-sac or take a taxi.

DIFFICULTY

"Sometimes ladies in high-heeled shoes had difficulty in getting over the cobble and I understand it would not be regarded as a breach of the new licence if they were carried to the public house either by sedan chair or rickshaw," said counsel for the brewers.

When the Judge asked, "Why not by stretcher?" He replied: "We think a sedan chair would be more acceptable to the licensing justices."—China Mail Special.

(The motion was made of who was to pull the rickshaws or carry the chairs).

'Dead' Brothers Meet Again

Corbish, Channel Islands, July 29. James Brown, 55, and his brother Ernest, 48, who both had been killed in the World War II, met across a hotel bar here today. Their meeting took place at the Highlands Hotel, managed by James.

Ernest arrived at the hotel with his wife for a holiday this morning. James, serving at the bar, told him he looked like a brother he had not seen since 1942. Ernest said he had the same feeling and the two men quickly discovered their relationship.

Celebrations in which all the hotel guests joined began tonight—and will continue until Ernest goes home to Stockton, Rugby, England.—Reuters.

JUMBO WELCOMED TO SUSAN

Presented With Bunch Of Carrots

Rome, July 29. Crowds cheered as Jumbo, the elephant, entered Susan today at the end of an attempt to follow Hannibal's route across the Alps.

The 11-year-old, two-ton elephant took most of the day walking the five miles from the French-Italian frontier to this town. She walked under the triumphal arch of Augustus Caesar to the municipal square, where she was presented with a bunch of carrots.

Later tonight the British Hannibal expedition were guests of honour at a dinner given by local officials.

Jumbo rested in a nearby garage. Tomorrow she will probably be transported back to her home in Turin Zoo.

The expedition had set out to prove that Hannibal and his elephant cavalry used the 8,170-foot Col de Clapier pass to attack the Romans from the rear.

But yesterday Jumbo failed to negotiate the Col de Clapier and had to take the modern road through the Moncenisio Pass.

As Jumbo crossed the frontier this morning, she presented a passport with her trunk to an Italian policeman and lifted the frontier bar, also with her trunk.—Reuters.

No Secret Anglo-US Agreement

London, July 29. British Defence Minister, Mr Duncan Sandys, today denied the existence of a secret Anglo-American agreement requiring Britain to maintain during the next five years bases for American-built Thor missiles on British territory.

The existence of such a secret agreement had been reported today by a London newspaper.

Mr Sandys, replying to a question by Labour Party former minister, George Brown, said there was no agreement of this nature, except that of February 1958, which concerned the installation in Britain of Thor rockets for the operation and firing of which British personnel was responsible.—AFP.

How Bardot Happened

by JOAN HARRISON

At 25 Brigitte Bardot is all manner of things to so many people, but to most she is a tousle-haired, wary-eyed symbol of sex with a permanent pout. Behind the carefully created Legend with the Sinuous Shape there has been a background never fully examined... until now. For here, disclosed for the first time, is the story that could only be told by her mother. And, with these intimate pictures of earlier years, it forms a photo-biography of How Bardot Happened.

1—Formative Years

BRIGITTE BARDOT was born 25 years ago on the fifth floor of a tall grey apartment house in Passy, a district of Paris.

The upper-middle class people there have the strictest conventions, a certain way of speaking, a restrained, elegant way of dressing and living.

And if Brigitte had not been born in that atmosphere, she would not have appeared in the way she did in that odd, sophisticated and brilliant man, film director Vadim Pléminin, known as Vadim.

Says Brigitte's mother, "My daughter, with her typical religious and bourgeois upbringing, excited Vadim. 'That's the amusing thing, to take a girl like her and make it appear as if she has gone completely off the rails.'"

Brigitte was 15 years old on the blustering March day in 1949 when her career was really decided.

She had just come back home from attending morning school at Hattener's, one of the best in Paris.

When the telephone rang Mme. Bardot answered. On the other end of the line was Mme. de la Villuchet, her husband's cousin. Mme. de la Villuchet edits the Junior Miss section of a French magazine.

THE TYPE

She told Mme. Bardot: "I'm in a real fix. I do hope you can help me out. The young girl who was to pose for me this afternoon has got scarlet fever. May I borrow Brigitte? She is pretty and just the type I want for the picture."

Brigitte thought there was no harm in it. So she and Brigitte went along to the offices of the magazine. "It was all over in five minutes," said Madame Bardot,

"I didn't think anything of it at the time." Weeks later Madame Bardot had another telephone call — from another woman's magazine.

The voice at the other end was demanding, but useful.

"We know your daughter is not a professional model and doesn't pose for cover pictures. But, just this once, wouldn't you allow her to? She is exactly the type of young girl we want for next week's cover. Don't worry, there won't be any publicity, we'll just use her initials, Mlle. B.B." Said Brigitte's mother: "Perhaps I did the wrong thing. But Brigitte was jumping up and down with excitement. The whole thing was a great game to her."

"Brigitte was never a professional cover girl. Like any girl of 15 she was thrilled to see her picture on the front cover of a magazine. She used to walk by the kiosk at the corner of the street to see it, dragging her little school friends with her. 'Look, I can remember her saying, 'see that, it's me. That's me on the cover.'"

Next, an express letter arrived at the Bardot apartment; addressed to Brigitte.

THEN FILMS

It said: "Would you like to go on the films? If you would, and it would interest you to make a test, telephone me. My name is Marc Allegret."

Brigitte ran with the letter to her mother. "Oh mother," she said "Let's answer it right away."

They went to the home of Marc Allegret, an apartment house just off the Champs-Élysées.

"I decided," said Madame Bardot, "to play the heavy mother because I didn't really want her to get into the films at all. I wanted her to keep on with her dancing. 'And,' said Madame Bardot, 'it went off just like that.'"

Finally, Marc Allegret said: "Well, madame, suppose we leave things as they are."

Afterwards, privately, he said to Vadim, who was present: "I don't want that girl. I can't stand the mother."

That was the first time Brigitte met the man who was later to become her first husband and guided her life in public and in private. She wasn't impressed with him then. As she and her mother left the apartment, the 15-year-old Brigitte said: "Mother, did you notice that queer-looking man? He's got a very odd face, don't you think?"

NOT LOVE

"It's true," said Mme. Bardot. "He is a curious-looking young man."

"It certainly wasn't love at first sight on her part. As far as I was concerned the incident was over and finished with. 'That was in July. In September my husband and I went on holiday to Biarritz, leaving Brigitte, my younger daughter, Mijanou, and my mother in our apartment."

"We had been away about a week when I got a telephone call from my mother."

"She said: 'There are some funny things going on. There's a most extraordinary young man, very strange indeed, who keeps on coming to the apartment. He spends hours with Brigitte. He says he is rehearsing her for a film test. She is to make with Marc Allegret.'"

"Oh indeed, I thought, and decided I'd better come back to Paris at once to see what was going on."

"I found Vadim, who by then had got quite a hold on my daughter, and she was fascinated by him."

TOMORROW:

Vadim—Svengali or husband?

Supposing she had been your daughter—Could you have seen her growing up to become this?

IN the years between... when gawkiness gives way to womanhood... Bardot never let slip the petulant expression that marks her out today. The fair hair, still free, the pout, still firm, the eyes still upwards, questioning. But the middle-class child with the ballet school background — aged 15, in holiday mood on the left — soon shed the conventions. Engaged at 16, married at 18... and those lips, well, it was later said that when she kissed she made a love scene really a work of art.

BARDOT combs her unruly hair that has become a trademark. She said once: "Sex appeal is no tape measure. It's the way a mind controls the body."

BARDOT with the hint of the catlike grace that earned her a place in a San Francisco students' list of the 10 Best Undressed Women in the World.

TOURING THE WORLD—ON HK$48 EACH

LONDON. TWO young Canadian cousins are touring the world on a three-year holiday — with only HK$96 between them.

They are Phil Stooshnov (21) and David Chernenkoff (23) from Calgary, Alberta; and when they reached Inverness, Scotland, they both agreed: "This is the most wonderful place we have been in so far."

Then they told of how they had started their holiday on April 18 with only HK$48 each. Said Phil: "We hitch-hiked our way three thousand miles across Canada before boarding a boat at Montreal to sail to Liverpool, England. On our

By a Special Correspondent

arrival there, we travelled up to Edinburgh, Scotland, and then Inverness.

"To get money," he said, "we worked at various places, doing anything from washing dishes to making ice-cream cones, and saving money from our wages."

"We brought a tent with us," said David, "and we camped out, cooking our own food. On one occasion while still crossing Canada we slept in our little tent while a blizzard howled around us."

In Edinburgh they bought a car for £10 out of their wages and, said David: "We'll just continue to use it until it falls apart, and then we'll discard it."

"This is the only kind of holiday for us," said David. "It's great to feel free and independent, meeting a new challenge every day and just taking things as they come."

David and Phil intend going to Aberdeen next, and will also visit Balmoral, where the Queen's Highland home is situated.

"Then," they said, "we will take in some of the country around the North of Scotland."

What we have seen of the Highlands so far is really breathtaking. It beats easily the scenery we have at home."

They are collecting photographs and newspaper cuttings of their journey and will make a scrapbook of them when they get home.

"We will go to Spain, France, Germany, Russia and any other countries we can get into—and out of," they said.

Phil added: "We hope to be in South Africa by Christmas."

WOMANSENSE

YOUR BIRTHDAY...By STELLA

THURSDAY, JULY 30

BORN today you are something of a daydreamer, especially in youth. But there is a wild streak of common sense in your make-up which causes you to look at life from a practical point of view and makes you realize that you can't live in a dream world all your life. The stars have given you exceptional talents and if you will make the best possible use of them, fame and success should not be long in arriving.

Since you have a good head for business, it is not likely that anyone will get very far ahead of you in any financial deal. You have very keen intuitions, sometimes almost psychic in their intensity. Consequently, if you learn to follow your "hunches" you will find that you are usually a few steps ahead of your nearest competitor. Always on the move, you will have to curb a tendency toward restlessness. Learn that you have to settle down and put down roots if you are to advance in life.

ON my last visit to New York I dropped in at the Regency Club and had the pleasure of seeing one of the best defensive players I have run across in some time.

West opened the three of hearts against the spade slam and after thinking the whole thing out South played the queen from dummy. He wanted the finesse to lose so he could win the next lead as he pulled cramps and discard all his hearts on the rest of dummy's heart suit.

Four Servicemen Among British Seeds For World Gliding Championships In Germany

By GEORGE HOGAN

Four of the final six pilots seeded by the British Gliding Association for the 1960 World Gliding Championships are Servicemen. The team chosen from these six will compete with other nations in Germany next summer.

One of the seeded servicemen is Lieutenant Colonel A.J. Deane-Drummond, MC, Commanding Officer of the 22nd Special Air Service Regiment who recently returned to Britain from Malaya.

He was British Gliding Champion in 1957 and was placed 10th this year. He holds the British National speed records round 100 and 200 kilometre triangles and the United Kingdom Out and Return record. He twice escaped from the Germans in 1941-42 and avoided capture in 1944 by hiding in a cupboard at Arnhem for 14 days. Commander H. C. N. Goodhart, a Regular officer of the Royal Navy, was winner of the Two-seater Class in 1956 World Championships and second in the Open Class in 1958. He came second in the British National Championships in 1957 and 1959 and holds a number of British records for altitude, distance and speed. Lieutenant Commander G.A.J. Goodhart, DSC, RN, at present with NATO Headquarters at Fontainebleau, holds the British National Record for Speed round a 300 kilometre triangle. He was placed seventh in the Standard Class at the World Championships in 1958 and 15th at this year's British Nationals.

Sergeant J. B. Williamson, Royal Air Force, radar instructor at RAF Station Cherhill, holds the United Kingdom single seater Height, Gain, and Absolute Altitude records. He also holds jointly several two-seater records for speed and goal-flight. He was ninth in this year's British Nationals and was second reserve pilot for the 1958 British Team.

Two Civilians

The two civilians among the final six seeded flyers are Mr D. H. G. Ince, DFC, who is a member of the Army Gliding Club and was third in the 1959 British National Championships. He won the 1958 National Aerobatic Contest and is actively concerned with the development and test flying of Olympia sailplanes.

Mr G. H. Stephenson, an electronic engineer, is the reigning British Champion. He was also Champion in 1953 and has been in the British Team on several occasions. In 1959 he became the first pilot to soar across the English Channel in a glider.

Four of the six seeds are in their 40's. Mr Ince is 38 and Sergeant Williamson 30. They all hold the coveted Gold C gliding badge for top proficiency and they also each hold two Diamond badges, except Commander J. Goodhart who is the first and only British pilot to be awarded three Diamonds. —Bancroft Service.

Cooper Ordered To Defend Title Against Erskine

London, July 29.

Henry Cooper, British and Empire heavyweight champion, was ordered today by the Boxing Board of Control here to defend his British title against Joe Erskine, of Cardiff, before December 31.

Cooper's last fight was in January when he took the British Empire title from Brian London, of Blackpool. The Boxing Board also announced that Frankie Jones, Scottish holder of the British flyweight title, will defend his crown against Johnny Caldwell, of Ireland, in Belfast on October 3.—Reuters.

FAMOUS SPORTS STARS—I HAVE MET

By ARCHIE QUICK

The one athlete who has an outstanding chance of winning a gold, silver or bronze medal for Great Britain at the Olympic Games in Rome next year owes his sporting eminence to a Television programme.

In his Wembley home, giant Mike Ellis was watching Peter Alliday demonstrate his hammer training for the 1962 Olympics at Helsinki on TV and, automatically, Mike found himself copying Peter's turns and throws. He did it the same as teenagers tap their toes to dance music.

But Ellis's big love was swimming, and he might not have found his niche as an international and record-breaking hammer thrower but for the arrival at Wembley Grammar School of Dennis Cullum.

Having founded the "Hammer Circle" club, enthusiast Cullum approached the school for facilities in the gymnasium—and was granted permission to use it on condition he coached the boys.

FIRST PUPIL

Naturally, as the biggest boy in the school, Ellis was the first pupil and he had unknowingly set his feet on the road to fame. He has gone a long way along it since then. Now he has the ability, the strength and the technique, but not always does he show burning enthusiasm. Often he has only just snatched victory with his last throw.

Yet look at his achievements. He became the best schoolboy in the land, and when he entered the senior ranks the change from the 12th weight to the 16lb made no difference to this Colossus of a man, in fact, he welcomed it. National Service gave him added opportunities and greater competition, and by 1950 he was an international, at the age of 19. He just missed being selected for Melbourne Games.

190LB GRIP

At Loughborough College it was discovered he had a 190lb hand grip—enough to break the bones of most people's hands in a shake. Soon he became the first Briton ever to reach a 200 feet throw, and since he has often passed the 210 mark, better than 20 feet anything his rivals can achieve. He holds the British record at 213 ft 1 in, won the Empire title at Cardiff with his last throw, and then, in one of his lackadaisical spells, could not reach the last six in the European Championships at Stockholm last August.

Ellis is now a master at Hove (Sussex) Modern Secondary School, and he told me recently that he is keenly looking forward to the rivalry of the West Germans, Poles and Russians these next few weeks. He has already beaten 210 ft in Warsaw and Hanover. "I feel I must really get down to it, and start preparing now for the Rome Games," he said. "It would be a fine advertisement for this country's youth and strength if I could win."

THE MOTHER & THE WIDOW OF TWO RACING DRIVERS ARE IN THE NEWS

MIKE'S GARAGE IS SOLD FOR £45,000

Louise Settles Down In Chelsea

By PAUL TANFIELD

London.

Last week, almost a year since the death of racing driver Peter Collins and sixth months after Mike Hawthorn was killed on the Guildford bypass, I had news of both their families.

Peter's widow, Louise, has bought a house in Chelsea. Mike's mother is selling the garage he left her, the Tourist Trophy at Farnham, Surrey, to the 26-year-old son of a North Country garage proprietor for around £45,000.

When Dr Andrew Cordier, Louise Collins's father arrived in England the other day he took one look at the little new home his daughter was decorating—and gave her some advice.

Psychology

"I told her not to put the finishing touches too soon," Dr Cordier, Deputy Secretary-General of U.N. told me in the Chelsea house last night.

"It's all a question of psychology. When you've put your heart and soul into something, and it is suddenly finished, it leaves an enormous gap."

"So Louise has agreed to leave some odds and ends—like buying a picture, mirror, or vase. It will give her something to think about."

I could see what the wise diplomat meant—with the first anniversary of Peter's death getting nearer. Louise told me: "This house has given me plenty to think about. It's the first real home of my own."

I chose all the furnishings, and my mother, who has been

Mike Hawthorn's garage on the day of his death.

with me for two months, made the curtains. "I start work any day now on a film for television. After that my main ambition is to be working full-time."

Copavanning

John Adams, married with three children, is the man buying Mike's garage.

He told me: "We've been looking for a place like this for a long time, and we shall be moving from Cambridge as soon as we can find a house. 'Meanwhile, I have a caravan. But I don't want to spend more than a couple of months in it.'"

Sugar Ray To Make Fight Decision Monday

New York, July 29.

Sugar Ray Robinson, whose year-long lay-off from the ring led to the National Boxing Association dispossessing him of his world middleweight title, will make known on Monday whether he is ready to return to the ring.

Promoter Sam Silverman announced this here, today, after two days of negotiations with Robinson and manager George Gainsford, over a proposed fight for the champion against Paul Pender.

$150,000 GUARANTEE—Silverman plans to put on the fight over 15 rounds at Boston on September 29 and has offered Robinson a guarantee of $150,000 and a percentage of the television receipts.

Pender, an ex-farman from Brookline, Massachusetts, has just made a spectacular comeback with a string of eight wins including a recent 10 rounds points decision over world ranking Tiger Jones.—APF.

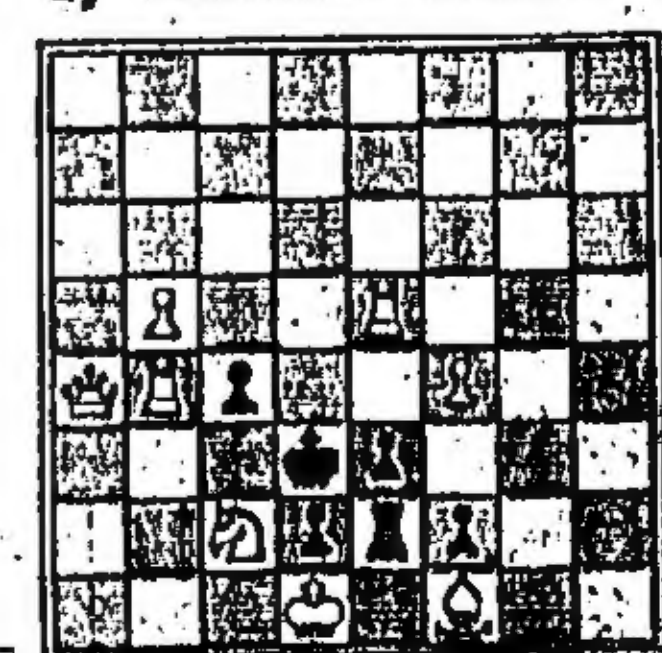

Cricket Mix-Up

Littleborough CC are pleased that the Central League Committee have agreed that they should keep four disputed points for their one run victory over Stockport.

Stockport claimed that one of Littleborough's boundaries was a four and not six, and that they, not Littleborough, won by one run. Littleborough replied that even if that six was not a six they hit a six later which was counted only as four, and, anyway, after they had won they threw away their last wickets to complete the match! —Bancroft Service.

Japanese Newsletter From David Gordon

Triumphant Year For Women—And Men Are Envious

Tokyo.
THIS year has been a most triumphant and rewarding one for Japan's lovely women, and when Miss Akiko Kojima won the Miss Universo title at Long Beach, she confirmed that their beauty and charm rank high indeed.

The "Holiday in Japan" troupe which is now performing in Las Vegas, met with such enthusiasm that there is talk of extending their tour from the original six months to two years
—and on Broadway at that.
Five mannequins who recently captured Australia's fancy, have been besieged with requests for return visits, but already one of them has been snatched up by a Parisian designer who rates her as "one of the world's five best models." And so it goes on.

But, while all this is very gratifying to the girls, the Japanese men aren't so happy about it. In fact, most of them are envious and resentful. For some not fully explainable reason, the girls are rapidly growing taller than the boys. It is quite noticeable on any street.

One insignificant Japanese male was arrested during the week by railway police for slashing girls' hips. He confessed to making 28 such attacks on "tall girls" as a form of "revenge for being made to feel inferior by them." This is an exaggerated case of a pettor, but it nonetheless illustrates the discomfiture of Japanese men at the prospect of having to look up to women physically when they have more or less been brought up to look down on them as inferiors.

SUMMER vacation for the schoolchildren started off with a customary count of the first day's dead and comparison with figures for the previous year.

Ten children were drowned in the vicinity of Tokyo alone. The Welfare Ministry said that in July last year 1,555 children were drowned, and in August another 1,388 lost their lives in the water.

HOSPITALS in resort areas
are now filling up with food poisoning cases at an alarming rate with Takasaki Beach near Tokyo taking the lead at 41 stricken consumers. Contaminated milk was blamed here. This was only one day's count. Another nearby beach produced a list of 20 similar poisoning cases on the same day. By summer's end, when statistics have been gathered from every prefecture, a shockingly huge total of actual deaths will be shown.
The Japanese exhibit absolutely no sense about spoiled

food. Well knowing the danger, they will serve and eat it because they feel it would be "wasteful" to throw it away. For the same reason, dozens of
would-be mountain climbers, when warned not to make an ascent on account of the weather, defy advice and proceed to slither and because they didn't want to "waste" the price of their train ticket.

EVER since Father Louis Vermeesch was questioned in connection with the death of an airline hostess who had been found strangled, a regular "hate campaign" has been carried on against the Catholic Church here.
The latest issue of "Bungei Shunju"—a respected cultural monthly not usually given to printing nonsense or outright scandal stories—contains a lengthy article called "The Inside Story About The Red-headed Priest."

Incidentally, we foreigners are invariably dubbed "blue-eyed" by the mass of Japanese, but this is the first occasion on which a particular segment of our community—the priests—have been given a specific distinction with the insulting term of "red-head." However, the Japanese miss few chances of getting in a dig at any foreigner, and by using this particular case in the scurrilous manner that they are, they have taken over an overall swipe at the entire Christian movement in this country—most of which has been of considerable benefit to them.

Without doubt, the best schools and hospitals are run through some foreign mission. However,
Semi-religious bodies have aided Japan in the improvement of its agriculture, and by all counts, this country owes a debt of gratitude to the men and women of various faiths and persuasions who have devoted so much of themselves to the welfare and betterment of Japan.

It may surprise those who do not know this country that there is a considerable amount of anti-Semitism here. How it ever started, nobody knows, but at the mention of a Jewish name,
most Japanese sneerily sneer
"Yudai-ya-jin, ne?"—"A Jew, isn't he?"
Never to my knowledge, when a subscription list has appeared in any paper here for aid to victims of some tragedy or disaster, that it wasn't the Jewish Community which headed the list with the most generous donations.

THIS case of the hostess is being used as another means of whipping up anti-foreign sentiment of the "blue-eyed" variety.
Already the huge Korean and Chinese community are irrevocably linked with smuggling, dope trafficking and prostitution and to be able to "get something" on another batch of foreigners suits
the local mentality admirably—or dishonorably, if you prefer it. Putting it bluntly, we are really not very welcome here,
despite the protests of goodwill,
mutual understanding and friendship for all which the politicians spout.

BUT, reverting to "Beauty Contests" again, there is still hope for the reader who would care to journey to Oguchi City in southernmost Kagoshima Prefecture.
There they hold an annual-old folks' contest for those over 65
and who are either grandfathers or grandmothers. At the event
this week when 30 contestants were screened for blood pressure, eyesight, memory, condition of teeth, strength of hand-grip, curve of the back and a dozen other tell-tale signs of Father Time's clutching hand. Nochi-Tangawa won the trophy for impressing the judges that he was a good 20 years younger in body and spirit than his actual 81 years.

LATEST racket here is selling La suckers lightning conductors for their TV antennae. Somebody spread the necessary rumor that houses had been struck through the antenna and burned up quickly thereafter.
Despite the Japan Broadcasting Corporation's statement that the claim was nonsense, lightning conductors are a fast seller at the moment.

TOURISTS INVADGE LONDON

Changing Of The Guards—The Main Attraction

London.
Heads turned, necks craned. The wandering attention of the crowd was suddenly focussed on music coming from the marching band of a Guards Regiment.
As they came into view, people sighed, camera shutters flicked, and little children were quickly hoisted onto the shoulders of their parents.

This was the culmination of the famous Changing of the Guards at Buckingham Palace, but Christopher Robin would hardly recognise the place. It is now one of the main tourist attractions in London, and hardly a day passes during the busy summer season that the ceremony is not watched by hundreds of visitors.

Every morning at approximately 10.30, the Guards parade in the forecourt of the palace, and most of them wear the black berets and scarlet tunics to the black busbies, the bear-skin helmets that add a foot-and-a-half of height to the soldiers. The troops are inspected, and the band plays a medley of old favourites, and the crowd loves it.

Everywhere
There were approximately 107,400 tourists in England last month, and most of them saw the Guards change at one time or another. Of that number some 57,000 were from the United States, and they continue to come over in hordes. They come in large tours, small tours, by themselves, with their families, and more and more of them are doing it every year.

London this summer is a melting pot for Americans.
Americans are everywhere in town. The British do not mind for the more Americans here,
the more money they spend.
Contrary to popular conception, they do not stick out in a crowd unless they wear something violently American, such as a Mod or a Beatnik, or unless they speak. An American accent is unmistakable, but apart from that they are lost in the crowd of short-sleeved, open-necked sport shirts and the over-the-shoulder cameras that seem to be the international trade-mark of tourists.

The Tower
Buckingham Palace is not the only tourist mecca in London, however. Almost as many can be found at the famous Tower of London.
The traditionally dressed Yeomen, "Beefeaters" who act as guides, tell the tales with the right amount of bloody details balanced with just enough humour to keep their audience interested and not disgusted.
Also located in the tower are the Crown Jewels.
At St Paul's Cathedral still more tourists are found. One of the largest churches in the world, St Paul's is visited by more people in a month than many churches seen in a year.
On its steps some summer afternoons, a military band plays for the benefit of people on their lunch hour.

With the tremendous influx of Americans, the British are slowly becoming used to American manners. No longer does it surprise a waitress in a hotel when she is asked in the morning for coffee before even a glass of orange juice, and it is rare that a particularly American phrase will not be understood by an Englishman.

Most of the American tourists are very favourably impressed with the reception that the English have given them. How do the British feel about Americans? As one Englishman summed it up, "most of them are fine individually, it's a mass that they are sometimes not so nice."—UPI.

German Boys
In Sydney
Learn Their Own Language

Special classes are being held in Sydney to teach young German children
to speak, read and write German.
Dozens of German families are growing apart because parents cannot make themselves understood to their English-speaking children.
Organizers of the classes
said today that language barriers had created "dangerous situations" in many multicultural families.
The Lutheran Church, German-speaking Catholics, and several non-denominational bodies have organized the classes.

Minister of the Goulburn Street, city, Lutheran Church,
the Rev. G. Wittmann, said many German parents had to rely on their children to handle all correspondence.
He knew of 10-year-old children having to write to solicitors, doctors and municipal councils for their parents," he said.

Big strain
"This situation often leads to trouble."
"Parents become upset because of their reliance on their children, misunderstandings arise and great stress is placed on the family."
"Many families are growing apart because parents and children speak two different languages."

Mr. Wittmann said 70 children were attending the classes every Saturday morning.
Older or do not have the educational background to learn English," he said.
"The only way to attack the problem is through the children."
"We want the children to know
the fundamentals of reading and writing German."

THE inhabitants of a district — which has valid reasons for not wanting a power station in its midst can always make use of the recognised democratic procedure. The Government Department responsible for the scheme holds an inquiry, draws up a report, presents the report to itself, overrules the objections, and then gets on with the work.

Unfashionable is the only word for any woman whose pulse will not beat faster on reading of a hat described as "a scaled-down velvet bowler, tarned black, feathered red, and preventively veiled."

Boys Leave On Holiday Camp

Forty-five boys left Kowloon this morning for the Fifth International Boys' Camp at Junk Bay. The camp will last a week and while there the boys will have a full programme of handicrafts, games and swimming. Last year the boys lived in tents but this year they will live in a newly erected one-storey building. The boys are taking along their own blankets and eating utensils. Accompanying the boys to the Camp this morning were Messrs. D. G. Taylor (Asst. Gen. Secretary, EYMCA), On-way Woo (Ext. Secretary, EYMCA), Rev. G. Krasnow (Chaplain to US Services), J. Atkinson (HK Christian Council) and Hsu Ping-kwan.

ACCUSED'S ALLEGED STATEMENT ON "THE ONLY ENEMY IN MY LIFE"

A factory worker charged with the murder of a woman was alleged to have said she was "the only enemy in my life, and that is why I killed her," the Supreme Court was told today.

The worker, Chau Shui-wan, 25, is accused of stabbing Yin Mei-chu to death on April 22 at Lee Tai Textile Factory. Detective police constable Lee Chuen told the court he had seen Chau on April 22 at the textile factory. Two Knives Chau had admitted killing the woman with two knives. Later at the police station he had written a statement again admitting he killed the woman, Lee said. After the prosecution closed its case, the accused gave evidence about his relations with the deceased. He said he married her in Swatow, in March 1957, and their marriage was formally recognised by the People's Government in May. He said he and his wife came to Hongkong and at first lived together in Kowloon City, but on May 23, 1958, when he returned home from work, he found his wife had left him. The accused said that he sought employment at the Lee Tai Textile Factory, on April 18, this year, being introduced by a Swatow worker there. He was told to start work on April 21. He said that on April 18, while in the reception room of the factory, he suddenly noticed the photograph of his wife among those of all the factory workers. On April 20, when he went to the factory to complete formalities, he met his wife and asked her to return his ring which was a family heirloom. The accused told the jury, "I decided not to take up this job because I found my wife was working there and because I had heard many rumours about her, so I purposely reported for work late on April 21."

Not Sacked However he was not dismissed and he spent the night sleeping in the factory. The next morning he started work early. He felt thirsty and wandered into the "blowing room" to get some tea from an urn. On his way back to work after his drink he suddenly came upon his wife working there. He said he was so surprised to find her that he called to her and asked whether she had brought his ring back. His wife became very angry and eventually said that he could get it back from a man called Chau Kwong-ling, so he went back to his work. The hearing is unfinished. Chau is being tried before Mr. Justice A. D. Scholles and a jury of four women and three men. Mr. G. H. Smith, Crown Counsel, is prosecuting, assisted by Mr. D. G. Willis, Crown Counsel, and Mr. E. H. Mow, acting Superintendent of Police. Mr. T. Shirook, instructed by Mr. D. Q. Cheung, of F. Zimmern and Co., is defending.

A SENSATIONAL development in the Gunpowder Depot frauds of last year was made public for the first time yesterday when, during the Finance Committee meeting at the Legislative Council, the Colonial Secretary, the Hon. Sir Thomas Southern, read an extract from a letter from Angel Julian, confessing to the thefts.

The Colonial Secretary further stated that Julian had given the names of the receivers of the stolen property but Government had not been able to bring a case against them, owing to lack of evidence.

Gunpowder, imported by various big Hongkong firms, was stored in the Depot. Following the discovery of Julian's disappearance, it was also found that more than $30,000 worth of explosives had been taken.

The Colonial Secretary read part of a letter said to have been written by Julian which said: "I was terrified out of life and have walked away and will commit suicide elsewhere. Some day you will read it in the papers."

One of the Colony's best-known and most popular residents, Mr. C. L. Sandes, is to leave Hongkong for good by the Empress of Japan today accompanied by his wife. He is leaving the East owing to the fact that he has not enjoyed good health. Formerly Manager of the Hongkong Office of the Mercantile Bank of India, he later joined the firm of Layton and Co., exchange and bullion brokers.

An atmosphere of acutest tension prevails in Europe following the murder of Chancellor Dollfus of Austria by Nazis.

Italian troops are on the march to the Austrian frontier following the promise of Premier Mussolini to protect with all the means at his command the independence of the republic. This paragraph appeared under a big banner headline of six columns saying "ITALIAN TROOPS ON THE MARCH Mussolini promises to protect Austria."

DEGREE FOR HK GIRL

Miss Susan Ting, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Y. C. Ting of 147 Island Road, Stanley, will graduate with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Business Administration at the 36th Commencement of Bryant College of Business Administration tomorrow. The Bryant College is in Providence, Rhode Island, U.S.A.

Cheque For Refugee School

Mrs. R. T. Eng, President of the Hongkong Council of Women and Mrs. R. R. Knapik, Chairman of the Fund-raising Committee, yesterday presented a cheque for $2,000 to Mrs. Elsie Elliott for the Mu Kuang School for refugee children.

In addition to the money, the ladies promised to supply vacation blinds for the new premises in Kowloon City. The President told Mrs. Elliott that the Council planned to put on a gala premiere before Christmas in order to raise further funds for the school.

Court Sequel To Girl's Death In Car Accident

A serious traffic accident, which occurred on June 22, on the Castle Peak Road and in which a teen-age Chinese girl was fatally injured, was recounted at the Kowloon District Court this morning before Judge H. H. B. How.

As a result of the accident, a 19-year-old Chinese youth, Paul Lau, the driver of the car in which the girl died, was accused of dangerous driving causing death when he appeared before the Judge this morning.

Mr. A. Zimmern, instructed by the Attorney General, is appearing for the Crown. Mr. E. A. L. Wright, and Patrick Yu, instructed by Ford, Kwan and Co., are representing the accused.

To Tsun Wan

The Crown's case is that, on the afternoon of June 22, four people—two women and two men, one of whom was the accused—were travelling in a car from Kowloon to Tsun Wan.

At a spot near the six-mile stone on the Castle Peak Road, the car which was driven by the accused, was involved in an accident.

As a result the girl, Judy Chan, was found fatally injured after being admitted to hospital. The hearing is continuing.

APOLOGY

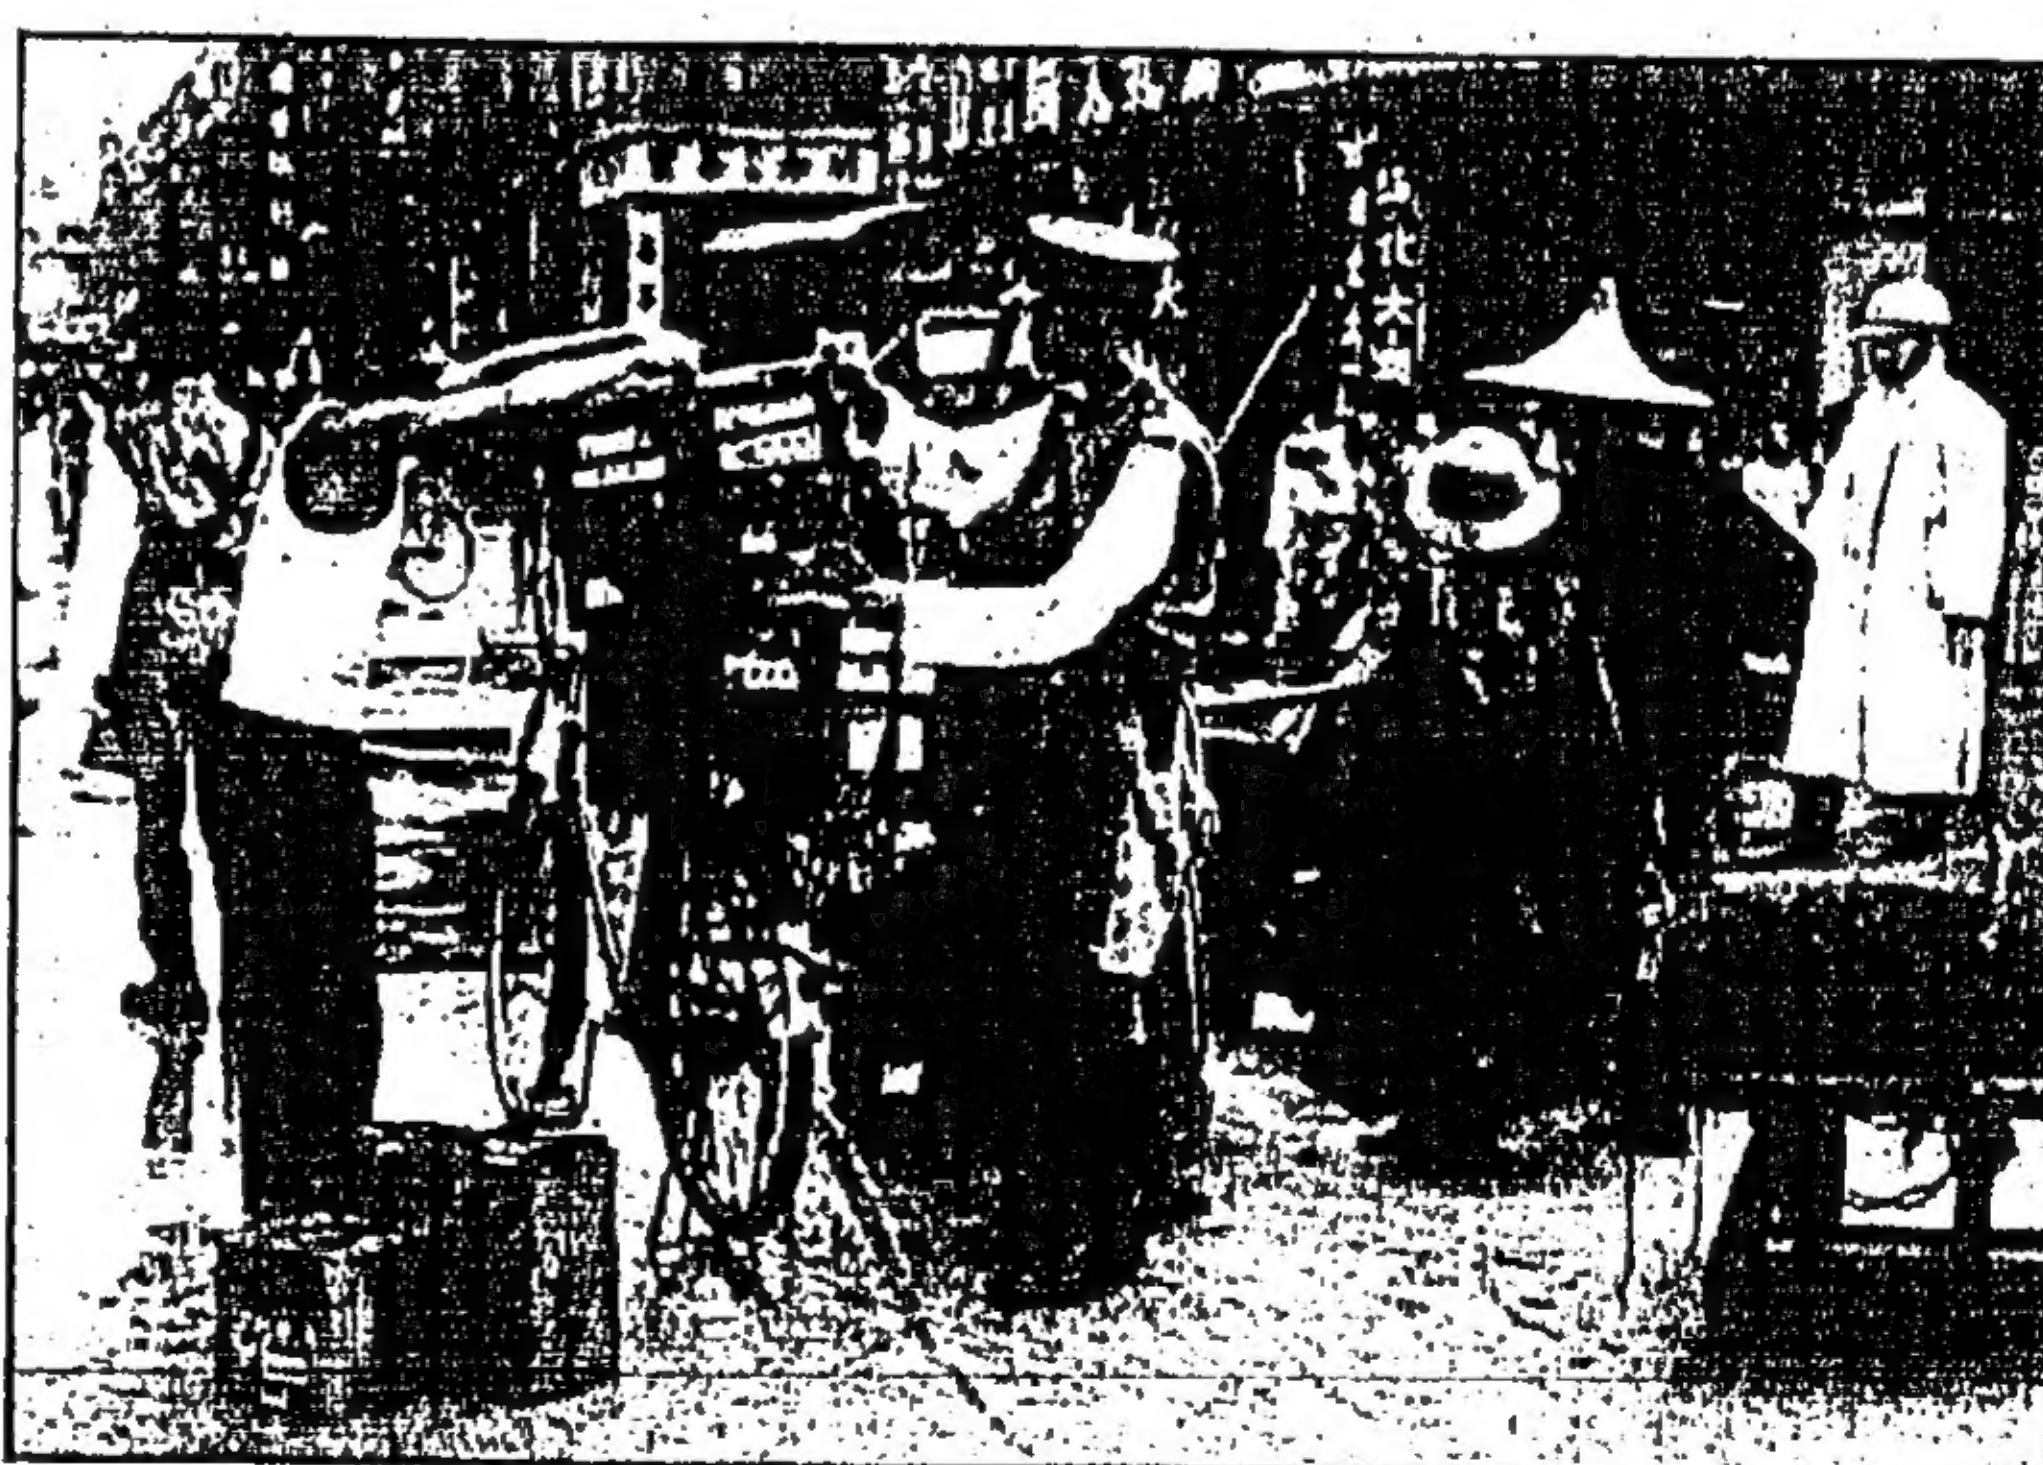

In the issue of the China Mail of July 22, 1959 the China Mail published on page 10 of the late final edition a letter to the Editor under the heading "Under Fire." In this letter the writer, referring to Mrs. Beatrice Church, stated:

"As a student of psychology, it is not hard for me to see at once that she is suffering from a folie de grandeur, as every human's behaviour is either motivated by envy, jealousy or folie de grandeur, therefore I have with charity qualified her superwoman's efforts as 'grand madness'."

The China Mail now recognises that the above statements are wholly unfounded and takes the earliest opportunity of correcting its error in publishing such letter, and of tendering to Mrs. Church its sincere apologies.

The China Mail trusts that she will accept the expression of the China Mail's regret for any pain or annoyance that she may have suffered.

Police Start Education Blitz

Above, a policeman gives instructions to an overloaded cyclist.

A "task force" of Hongkong Police traffic officers picked the roundabout at Kowloon City to begin a motorists' education week.

The campaign, which started last Tuesday, is being undertaken by 20 officers and men of the Traffic Branch, whose duty it is to teach safe driving habits.

An officer said this morning that every conceivable type of traffic offence could be found at this roundabout. It serves four major roads—

Prince Edward Road, Argyle Street, Clearwater Bay Road

to the rapidly developing Kowloon Industrial area, and Sung Weng Toi Road to branch off to Hungshom—and several side streets in Kowloon City itself.

The Inspector said that the campaign is not so much to prosecute, but rather to lead and advise motorists, cyclists, tandem drivers as well as pedestrians, "to do it the right way."

Normally traffic at this roundabout is very haphazard. But under the keen eyes of the Police this morning it was very smooth.

Despite this, traffic officers still found it necessary to remind offenders of their mistakes and urge them to exercise more care and courtesy.

The campaign will last a few more days. Then the "task force" will move to another hot spot, where they will start all over again.

A special group of traffic officers was formed a few months ago to teach Kowloon motorists better driving habits. Since its formation the officers and men have been busy educating the pedestrians on how to cross the road safely.

DRIVER FINED $500

Youths Offer $6 To Be Taken To Beach

A man who agreed to drive four youths to a beach for the price of a lunch was convicted and fined $500 or two months' gaol by Mr. I. T. Morris at Central Magistrate's Court this morning.

Mr. Hon-man, 31, of 38 Main Street, Stanley Village, pleaded not guilty to charges of driving a private car for hire and driving without third party insurance.

Senior Superintendent Mr. A. Morrison said, this morning that on July 12, at 11.45 a.m., he drove past defendant's car at Main Street, Stanley.

Mr. Morrison said the man was talking to four youths and as his car's windows were open, he heard someone mention "five dollars."

He said he drove past the car slowly, and saw the four youths get into the car and drive away.

Mr. Morrison said he then stopped the car and questioned the youths, who admitted later they were to pay defendant $6 for taking them to Big Wave Bay.

The four youths Skip Heinecke, Fletcher MacGregor, Jan Yoo and Peter McTrevell testified that they knew defendant and that as he had not taken his lunch, they agreed to pay him $6 to take them to the beach.

In his defence, defendant said he was also going to Shek O beach later in the day and therefore he took the four boys to the beach.
